To all parties concerned,
I have been an XM subscriber since November 2003. I absolutely enjoy the excellent service I am receiving at a great price. The instant traffic and weather service for the Orlando, FL area is far superior than any other media offering information on those topics. When I listen to XM traffic and weather, the source of the information is Trafficpulse, which I have also heard on my local PBS radio station on FM. Apparently, Public Broadcasting has access to the same information as XM satellite radio and that would suggest that other AM and FM broadcasters would have access to that information as well. Whether or not AM and FM broadcasters want to be competitive with XM is solely a business decision and should not be regulated by protectionist legislation. As I see it, XM is to AM and FM, as Cable TV is to VHF and UHF.
